Change 2:

RapidDeploy designs, develops, and releases software using an agile development methodology. As new features for each of our products are considered, they are prioritized against the current backlog of priorities. As new features are designed, developed, and released into production, the next priority feature is then designed, developed, and released. In this way, RapidDeploy will continually enhance our products. The commitment from RapidDeploy is to prioritize the below features and work collaboratively with NCT9-1-1 on the following objectives for each feature:

1. Define the minimum viable user requirements for each feature. If this is not possible when attempted, a date will be set to review the requirement when more information is anticipated to be available or mutually agree to descope the requirement if additional information is not anticipated within the initial contract term.
2. Design the feature around those minimum viable requirements.
3. Commit to a delivery date for the feature.
4. Build the Feature
5. Test the Feature
6. Release the Feature into UAT for review.
7. Release the Feature into Production.
8. Repeat the process for the next, prioritized feature.

For each feature listed for development, RapidDeploy will conduct a requirements review session with NCT9-1-1 management two weeks prior to beginning development and will execute a written Change Order detailing the mutually agreed requirements for the feature. Any change or addition to the feature requirements and delivery expectation changes as a result will be managed through a Change Order subject to mutual acceptance by the parties. Additionally, any changes to third party connections that may result in feature requirement changes and delivery expectations, will be managed through a Change Order document and approval

The following table represents the features to be designed, developed and implemented with NCT9-1-1.

The features will be delivered by the due date; however, it is the intent of this process that RapidDeploy will provide interim delivery dates for each feature shown due on the same date. A feature has been delivered when it has been tested and functionally accepted against the agreed feature requirements by NCT9-1-1; and is available for deployment in the production environment; and such deployment is not being delayed by the Contractor. For the avoidance of doubt, the delivery is not considered late until after the date listed in the “Due Date” column.

In the event that Contractor is unable to provide one or more of the items in Table 4, Contractor shall provide an alternative solution at no additional cost to NCT9-1-1.

[RFP Reference] Description	Due Date

Change 3:

The table within Section 4.2 Other RFP Response Commitments (Table 5) is to be replaced in its entirety with the following table. Step 1 of the process described above is to be initiated by RapidDeploy in a timeframe which provides ample time for Steps 2-8 to occur within the initial term of the contract.

The features will be delivered by the due date once committed, however it is the intent of this process that RapidDeploy will provide interim delivery dates for each feature due on the same date. For the avoidance of doubt, the delivery is not considered late until after the feature's committed due date.
